[redacted] He told the Senator that in view of the extreme sensitivity of the source of this information he should not pass it on to his Committee or to the Committee staff at this time, and that when General Taylor or the Chiefs of Staff testify he could merely tell the Committee that there was an indication of such a test during June. The Director later said that the JAEIC report was not to be passed to the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy because of its special intelligence security restrictions but that he would talk to Senator Pastore about the matter.
